About Michelle Gottschall

My family has deep roots in Craig, dating back to the early 1900s. Growing up in this tight-knit community, I learned the value of hard work, resilience, and family. I spent much of my childhood outdoors, hiking, fishing, and snowmobiling. By 2010, I was ranked 4th in the nation for female snowmobile racing, a passion that taught me discipline and perseverance.

In 2013, I met my husband, Charlie, and we eloped in 2020. We have two boys, Kyson and Lincoln, who bring us the most joy. As a family, we love spending time outdoors, creating lasting memories. We always make time for each other and our community, whether it's helping on our friend's ranch or boating at Flaming Gorge with our family.

Even as an amateur, my passion for photography has been a creative outlet, and I enjoy capturing the world through my iPhone. Travel is also important to me, and I aim to teach my kids the value of experiences over possessions.

Grateful for the love and lessons of my family, I strive to live a fulfilling life, centered around hard work, adventure, and meaningful experiences. This mindset also drives my service on the city council. I'm committed to preserving Craig's small-town values while embracing growth and opportunities for the future. My role allows me to advocate for the community, ensure transparency in government, and teach my children the importance of civic engagement. Ultimately, I hope to leave a positive legacy for future generations in Craig.
