OVERVIEW

The City of Rhinelander is the county seat of Oneida County, Wisconsin, which is in the northeast portion of the state. It first emerged as a community in the late 1880's and has grown to over 8,000 residents. Known for its outdoor recreational activities like fishing, hunting, biking, and skiing, Rhinelander attracts visitors year-round to explore its lakes, trails, and forests. The city also celebrates its unique culture and history through the Rhinelander Hodag, a mythical creature said to inhabit the local forests. The Hodag has become a symbol of the city, embodying the community's spirit and its connection to the natural environment.

After several years of leadership changes, Rhinelander sought to create a strategic plan to foster cohesion and collaboration across city departments and the city council. In January 2024, the City of Rhinelander engaged Northspan to facilitate a 10-year strategic plan with a five-year focus. City leadership engaged the City Council and city staff members in a process to lay the groundwork for future success.

Participants in the strategy planning committee included the mayor, city administrator, seven alderpersons on the City Council, and eleven city department heads. The group's strategic planning process included a community survey, a strategic planning committee survey and city leadership interviews in February, four strategic planning workshops in March, and an opportunity for feedback and edits in early April before final approval on April 29, 2024. The new strategic plan seeks to bring together many of the city's activities behind a common vision, mission, and core values and provide concrete, measurable steps with which to make the vision a reality.

3. Strategic planning committee survey
4. Pre-workshop interviews
5. 03.19.2024 Strategic Planning Session 1 of 2

7. 03.27.2024 Draft Strategic Plan Review & Feedback
8. 04.29.2024 Strategic Plan Board Presentation

COLLECTION OF BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The strategic planning process began with a series of meetings and communications with City of Rhinelander staff that provided contact information, materials detailing the organization's work and impact, and clarification over the plans for the engagement. This phase also included the collection of background demographic and economic data from the US Census American Community survey to provide an overview of the current situation and recent trends in Rhinelander and surrounding areas. This information was presented at the first Strategic Planning Session.

COMMUNITY INFORMED SURVEY

Throughout February, members of the Rhinelander community were asked to participate in a survey to gather ideas about what they would like the city to focus on in its strategies. 302 respondents completed the survey. Participants were asked to rate the city on services and priorities, complete a SWOT analysis, and offer ideas regarding a vision for the City of Rhinelander. Full results of the survey are available in the appendix titled City of Rhinelander Community-Informed Survey Summary 03.07.2024.

STAFF AND STAKEHOLDER SURVEY

The City of Rhinelander solicited input from staff and alderpersons in a survey completed in February 2024. The survey received 14 responses. Participants were asked to rate the city on a variety of perceptions and services in a format that aligned with the community-informed survey, brainstorm ideas for the practical vision and underlying contradictions workshops within the strategic planning process, and identify the city's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats. Full results of the survey are available in the appendix titled City of Rhinelander Strategic Planning Committee Survey Summary 03.07.2024.

PRE-WORKSHOP INTERVIEWS

Prior to the start of the strategic planning process, Northspan conducted interviews with the City of Rhinelander's alderpersons, city administrator, and department heads. These 16 interviews drew out insights on members' roles in the strategic planning process, identified things that were going well, and identified potential issues for the community. It explored participants' perceptions on the process, their insight into the broader community, and fostered thought on training and succession planning. A complete survey summary is available in the appendix titled City of Rhinelander Pre-Workshop Interviews Summary 03.07.2024.

INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL ANALYSIS

Northspan reviewed an array of past reports, studies, and surveys completed by the City of Rhinelander and augmented it with its own research on economic and demographic trends for the city and surrounding areas. This research was presented at the first Strategic Planning Session. Details from this section are included in the main text of this report.

With the contradictions in mind, the participants then moved to identify six strategic directions that they believe will allow the City of Rhinelander to overcome these blocks. These strategic directions are available in the appendix in the document titled City of Rhinelander Practical Vision, Underlying Contradictions, Strategic Directions 03.20.2024.

DEMOGRAPHIC DATA AND ECONOMIC TRENDS ANALYSIS

DEMOGRAPHIC DATA AND ECONOMIC TRENDS ANALYSIS

In January and February 2024, Northspan completed an analysis of demographic data and economic trends in the City of Rhinelander and surrounding county. This research provides a snapshot of local economic conditions and how they have changed over time, giving some sense of what Rhinelander's future might look like.

DEMOGRAPHIC ANALYSIS

Population

According to 2022 US Census data, the City of Rhinelander has a population of 8,263 residents, which is an increase of 487 or 5.9% over 2012 population data. Oneida County has seen a population increase as well, with 1,770 people moving into the county over the past decade. The growth rate of both Rhinelander and Oneida County is slightly larger than the rate of the state of Wisconsin as a whole, which stands at 3.4%.

Table 1: City of Rhinelander Population Change, 2012-2022

|                            | 2012      | 2022      | % Change |

| Wisconsin           | 5,687,219 | 5,882,128 | 3.4%     |

Source: Social Explorer; U.S. Census Bureau

The majority of Rhinelander's population growth took place in the under 18 age brackets, with additional growth in the 18-34 age group. The only bracket that experienced loss between 2012 and 2022 was the 65-plus age bracket, which declined by 11.8%. Comparatively, the 65-plus age bracket increased by 22.6% across Oneida County during the same period, and the under 18 age brackets decreased slightly. 35-64-year-olds continue to be the largest age group in both Rhinelander and Oneida County.

Rhinelanders' number of households declined over the decade between 2012 and 2022 by 180, or 5.1%, while Oneida County had a modest growth of 151 or 1.2%. Family size went up slightly, so fewer people are living alone. This matches the previous observation that the growth has been in the youngest age brackets. This is rare for a rural place, and counter to the general trend nationally.

The City of Rhineland is a predominantly white community. It grew somewhat more diverse over the decade between 2012 and 2022, but the only groups with high rates of growth tended to be the smallest categories, leaving them liable to large shifts due to a small sample size. The population that identified as two or more races experienced growth, as did the population that identified as Some Other Race and American Indian and Alaskan Native. Populations of Native Americans are also subject to other changes related to how tribes track and grant membership and may experience significant changes in data that do not necessarily reflect a change in the actual racial composition of the community.

The median household in Rhineland had an income of $32,419 in 2012. This figure is lower than both Oneida County at $44,181 and the statewide figure of $52,627. While household income increased in the ten years between 2012 and 2022 by 47.2%, the median still lags the county and the state. The faster increase for those at the bottom of the income scale is consistent with national trends in recent years, which is a reversal of trends over previous decades in which income gaps between classes grew steadily across the country.

ECONOMIC ANALYSIS

Occupations of Rhinelander Residents

Rhinelander is a regional hub with an economy grounded in local services, manufacturing, and the local tourism industry, providing it with a healthy mix of economic options. Like most communities, education and health care are the dominant occupation sectors, but manufacturing is its second largest, and has grown at a very healthy rate over the past decade, with the Ahlstrom paper mill serving as a regional anchor. Retail, recreation, and tourism-related industries are also significant for the area, though they have faced more challenging headwinds amid the Covid-19 pandemic and broader trends toward online shopping. Other service-related sectors, while not growing, still form a reliable core of local business, while most other industries are relatively small and employ fewer than 100 people.

COMMUTING PATTERNS

The City of Rhinelander is a regional center in northern Wisconsin. It attracts workers from surrounding areas, pulling in a net of over 5,500 commuters a day from other nearby communities while losing just over 2,000, yielding a net influx of 3,644 workers on the average day. 1,558 of the city's 3,708 residents who are currently employed work in the city itself, a figure that is higher than those in some comparable communities, but nonetheless means over half of employed Rhinelander residents work outside its boundaries. These data points show the interconnectedness of Rhinelander with area communities.

Communities that send the most workers to Rhinelander include Tomahawk, Wausau, Crandon, Merrill, and Three Lakes. The most common places of employment for Rhinelander residents after Rhinelander itself include Wausau, Madison, Eagle River, Tomahawk, and Stevens Point; some of the more distant locations on this list, such as Madison, may indicate remote employees or employees of organizations that are based in Madison but have local branches. Census measurements of these trends are evolving, particularly in the aftermath of the Covid-19 pandemic and subsequent move toward greater remote work.

LABOR FORCE DATA

The 2021 American Community Survey identifies 3,643 Rhinelander residents, or just over 55% of the population, as participants in the labor force. Given the interrelationships between the city and its surrounding communities identified in the commute pattern data, labor force figures for Oneida County also provide valuable context on the local labor market.

Oneida County's labor force declined over much of the 2010s. At the start of the decade, it faced high unemployment as it emerged from the Great Recession, and while unemployment dropped by more than half over the long economic expansion that followed, employment numbers nonetheless shrank as the county population grew by only a small margin and a large cohort of Baby Boomers moved toward retirement. Although the economic shock created by the Covid-19 pandemic briefly drove up unemployment, the labor force grew in 2020 and, after a momentary regression in 2022, has shown signs of modest growth since. While a longer time horizon will provide more meaningful conclusions over the sustainability of and reasons for these changes, it does suggest a potential influx of residents amid Covid era desires for more space and access to nature, the relative safety of smaller communities, and the benefits of remote work. Unemployment in Oneida County fell to a historic low of 3.2% in 2023, a figure that reflects an exceptionally tight labor market.

ECONOMIC BASE ANALYSIS

This report provides a brief overview of the Oneida County economic base. (This analysis is better conducted at the county level than at the city level, both for data quality and to ensure a broader understanding of the local economy and its opportunities.) It begins by calculating the location quotient (LQ) of each major industry group. A location quotient shows the relative concentration of employment in an industry relative to a larger comparison area. This analysis compares Oneida County to the state of Wisconsin. Location quotients over 1 indicate a relative strength and concentration of employment in an industry, while those under 1 show a relative lack of employment.

A shift-share analysis is a method that subsequently analyzes how a county's location quotients have changed over time. Such an assessment of Oneida County shows that manufacturing, education, finance and insurance, administrative professions, and accommodation and food services are sectors in which its comparative advantage has grown over the past decade. The largest declines in location quotient, meanwhile, occurred in agriculture and forestry, retail trade, real estate, construction, and other services. Most other location quotients saw relatively few shifts over the decade or took place in industries with a relatively small number of employees.

Identification of location quotients and their trends allows for the completion of an economic base analysis that sorts the major industry clusters into four categories:

Economic Base: industries with high and growing location quotients

Transforming: industries with high, but declining, location quotients

Emerging: industries with low, but growing, location quotients

Declining: industries with low and declining location quotients

CONCLUSIONS

This analysis gives a general sense of the state and trajectory of the local economy. Oneida County's regional centers and somewhat older population lead to a strong concentration in health care, and accommodation and food services, which trades on the region's woods, lakes, and natural beauty, are foundational to its economic success, showing resilience even amid the Covid era disruptions. The growth in manufacturing is also an encouraging sign, showing strength and adding over 100 jobs over the past decade even amid a more complex outlook in other parts of the state and country. The county's healthy mix of growth in both newer and legacy industries offer a solid foundation that Rhinelander and neighboring communities can cultivate.

Retail trade, long central to the region's economy both as regional centers for shopping and through more niche shops targeting tourists, faces significant headwinds amid a changing retail environment. The construction and real estate sectors, likely hampered by high construction costs, rising interest rates, and limited work force have the potential to hold back growth in other sectors and further growth in the hospitality industry, which could be a warning sign for the region's longer-term outlook. The struggles in agriculture and forestry reflect some challenges in the national wood products industry and limited market size for certain recreational activities, even if they remain relative strengths for Rhinelander and its surrounding area.

Emerging industries in Oneida County tend to be service based, meaning they are generally subject to overall population trends and are unlikely to benefit from sustained economic development attention. The decline and general weakness in arts, entertainment, and recreation jumps out as a potential opportunity given strength of recreation and tourism to the local economy. There may also be opportunities within manufacturing supply chains to support more transportation-related industry in the area.

PRE-WORKSHOP INTERVIEWS SUMMARY

03.07.2024

Prior to the strategic planning sessions, Northspan conducted interviews via Zoom with city staff and alderpersons to gain further knowledge and capture their hopes around change management & maturing the organization including strategic planning feasibility and insight into the broader environment.

During February and March 2024, seventeen (17) interviews were completed. Those interviewed included alderpersons, city administrator, and city department heads.

- 12 Staff Members
- 5 Elected Officials

YOUR ROLE

Participants were asked what aspects of their job they enjoyed, and which aspects felt like a heavy burden, or a challenge. Top responses to what aspects interviewees enjoyed included advocating for constituents and working with other staff members. Burdens or challenges were most likely to include comments about interpersonal and interdepartmental relationships, lack of training, and budget concerns.

What part of your job do you really enjoy doing?

- Advocating for constituents and the community
- Talking to people and getting out into the community
- Influencing how we care for the community
- The mental challenges
- Camaraderie of the department
- Researching and asking questions
- Helping to create a positive culture
- Variety of the job
- Feeling like I have influence

What part of your job feels like a heavy burden or a challenge?

- Working with officials can be difficult
- Navigating the union
- Budgeting is always a challenge
- Working with other people who have differing ideas
- Hiring and finding qualified people
- Lack of training
- Inter-personal relationships
- Inter-departmental challenges
- Balancing wants vs. Needs

Interviewees were asked to share about the role they play in the city and if they feel their skills are valued. Participants responded in a variety of ways, including:

- At times. I hold a lot of credentials and the city doesn't recognize all of them since they were from the private sector. Pay needs to still be worked on to be comparable. Not apples to apples for the title versus the job.
- I do. Sometimes doing things not in job description but they are good things for the community.
- Yes, I do. I get feedback and appreciation.
- Yes and No
- For the most part
- Yes, by other employees. Not as much by administration.

Interviewees were asked to describe what is going well in the city and what complaints or issues they may have. Comments regarding what is going well included business growth and a sense of progress, while remarks regarding complaints or issues centered around a lack of housing and workforce difficulties.

What is going well?

- A lot is going well in Rhinelander. The city runs better, compared to several years ago. The community is moving forward. There is more transparency and efficiency. Residents have a healthier view of the city.
- We are on the right path to grow the city. We are starting to get the word out that we are ready to grow. The day to day functioning of the city is going well. We recently updated ordinances, so that's a good thing.
- One Nation One Project is going really well. We have a location and are just working out some final details. The city website was recently improved, which helps a lot with communication between the community and the city. We have a new City Administrator and I haven't heard any negative feedback, so I think that's going well.
- We do very well with ambulance responses. 2-4 minutes, pretty great, best in WI. We had a balanced budget last year; got it under control. Core staff are so great stepping up to the plate.
- Improving parks
- There is a lot of construction happening in Rhinelander. The population went up over the past few years, which is nice to see. There are a lot a additions happening- the dome on the high school, for example. People seem engaged in the community.
- People get along better right now. A few years ago was really bad, lots of conflict, media attention. Have tamed that, more respectable, higher levels, more togetherness.
- Watching department heads flourish, both new and existing staff members growing into their roles. Seeing everyone work together.
- New city administrator is very collaborative
- Dome has been a huge impact, we can have these tournaments, renting it, even college softball.

What complaints or issues do you have?

- I don't feel like the council's views are always respected. There have been times when items have been taken off the agenda, even though they need to be discussed.
- Going through administrators and public works directors. Economy and finding workers has been hard. Finding workers that want to work. Lots of training, no experience and no credentials. When no one understands the behind-the-scenes, it is hard to attract the right staff.
- Housing
- Not a lot of tourism or grant dollars to work with
- Difficulty in finding adequate staffing
- Departments each have their own needs
- Lack of diversity in local government- would like to see more younger people get involved
- Need more one-on-one time to understand each other and get to the root of problems

BROADER ENVIRONMENT

The next section of the interview asked about the broader environment including staff transitions, training needs, and succession planning.

How is your work evolving, and what does that mean for the type of people and skills that the City of Rhinelander needs?

- The council is asked to do more financial management, for example TIF- regarding business development
- We need more police officers and a new facility for PD, FD, and City Hall in one place. We need more marketing to bring people to the city.
- Different world compared to 1990.
- Business is booming here. In the past few years, several businesses have moved in to Rhinelander, including several hotels, a Starbucks, L & M, and others.
- Talent pool to pick from has dwindled.
- EMT and paramedics are having to do more with less
- Evolving - parks are getting more and more popular, need to maintain, keep them clean, keep the facilities up to date.
- Council meetings have gotten shorter, which is good and bad. Sometimes it seems like councilors do not want to take the time to do their due diligence and simply want to rush through decisions. No one wants to be part of committees anymore, they want to do all committee work during the meeting, but there isn't enough time to do all of it in shorter meetings.
- Good city staff members who seem like they are planning to stick around.
- Lack of training for city staff members
- Providing continuity and stability for a change.
- Need larger employee base
- New website has helped a lot

How is the community changing, and what does that mean for the type of people and skills that the City of Rhinelander needs?

- Business development, town is getting older and yet young families seem to be moving in, water system needs to evolve and improve
- Community is changing in that there are more younger people and young families.
- Ready for change.
- Housing is a big issue. With new businesses, we need places to house them. We recently hired new staff for code-enforcement, so I'm hopeful that housing can move ahead a little better.
- Ebb and flow so much. We still have a group that wants to stay small but most are seeing that the growth is positive for the community as a whole.
- Way behind in residential capacity.
- We are a more transparent government than we've ever been and it's appreciated.
- Deeper appreciation for the municipal workers now.
- Rhinelander is slowly growing, we have to do a lot more work on the outskirts of town plus everything we've been doing for 20 years.
- More sidewalks etc., more snow removal, going to need more people to meet the demand
- There is sometimes a feeling of hopelessness; I'd like to see more of a can-do attitude.
- People in the community are getting older.
- It's still relatively expensive to live here and the wages aren't high enough, so young people tend to leave.
- Young people aren't as involved in civic activity like city government.
- There is a shortage of affordable housing.

- Communication.
- Keeping younger community members involved in things like this so they see value and want to stick around. Making sure the youth are involved.
- City needs to start catering to tech, know in process of how to make people pay for resources, not have to drive across, fill out applications.
- We're doing very well. Growing, but don't have the housing to support that growth.
- Tons of green space, outdoor activities, much more going on than in my community, lots of rec.
- Trying to keep up with growth, keeping our ability to manage that.
- Have to look at safety of the city, PD and FD may need to grow as we grow.
- Going through a phase - significant, sudden growth

Do you see any current or potential future gaps in City of Rhinelander staffing?

- Possibly in the public works
- Leadership gaps
- Nothing major other than many departments not having the staff that they need.
- As an Alderperson, I really only work with department heads, so I'm not sure. I would like to see a city staff directory developed so I know who works for the city.
- Grant writer, think we might have someone at the library that can do this.
- Some departments have open positions.
- Probably need to be looking at a community development and grant writer position.
- Needing a mechanic for a while, almost 2 years, some of those jobs have been really hard to fill, street department needing good staff and that department has shrunk, need more over there
- Some planned and unplanned retirements always come up.
- Street department paying attention to be sure they can get skilled up. How can we pay for training and skilling up our hires?
- We have several gaps coming up - planned retirements, etc. but we have a plan to fill those. I would like to see fully-staffed police and fire departments, and they are trying to fill open slots in those departments.
- We're seeing it's very hard to get firefighters, PD. Just not many people interested in the line of work, pool has diminished, used to line up out the door and that has gone by the wayside.

Are you aware of succession plans that are in place for future staff transitions?

- A number of people have retired in the past few years, but I don't know of any coming up. I would like more clarity around the city's policy of succession
- Lots of turnover in the last two years, lots of new people or people who have been promoted, lots of responsibility change but progressing.
- Not a lot right now
- No, sometimes we know in advance, but most often there isn't time to plan properly.
- I am not. Not a lot of people in that 5 year retirement space, more in their 20-50s.
- Yes, we have several plans in place to address staffing changes in the next few years.
- Some departments like Police, Fire, etc. are probably looking at succession planning in the future.

What types of training does the City of Rhinelander need to provide to ensure staff develop the skills the organization needs?

- Financial planning for local governments
- Conflict resolution training
- Leadership training
- I would like to see new elected officials complete a civic training before starting on the council. It would help them understand the process and learn the language.

CITY OF RHINELANDER
PRE-WORKSHOP INTERVIEWS SUMMARY

- Safety training
- Management and personnel training
- HR related would be good. FMLA, FLSA training etc. HR team is new department and figuring out how to build it out.
- Getting along with the public, getting the work done, when in the public's eye how to portray a positive proactive attitude.
- Customer service mindset.
- Maybe more police and medic training
- CDL, driver training, we should be paying for it when we hire so that new hires don't have to on their own. HR does a lot of scheduling for our safety trainings for everyone so each department doesn't have to do it separately.
- I want to see staff go to lots of conferences, workshops, do leadership training, interpersonal skills training, conflict resolution, teamwork exercises, etc.
- Really pressed for leadership development training.
- Ethics training
- Software training

STRATEGIC PLANNING

The next section of the interview focused on the strategic planning process. While most comments indicate a positive expectation, several expressed skepticism and confusion about the process.

Interviewees were asked, What's the mood as we enter this strategic planning process? Excitement? Frustration? Why?

Answers include:

- Long overdue
- Looking forward to setting goals and advancing the agenda
- Hopeful, excited
- Waiting to see
- Semi-excited
- Skeptical
- Confused
- It might be waste of time and resources
- Very positive
- Very beneficial
- Relief

Have you been a part of past processes, at City of Rhinelander or elsewhere? If yes, what made them successful or unsuccessful?

- Yes, I've been part of planning processes and the most successful have resulted in identified priorities
- Yes, success depends on strong leadership and making sure we don't get caught up in the process. Keep moving forward.
- Yes, some have been successful in planning for the future but some processes have dragged out too long and focused too much on team building rather than creating a feasible plan for the city.
- No, never done this before.
- Yes, in other forms like a business. Open communication is key
- Never been successful in the past, sat on a shelf
- Yes, but they have never met the goals.
- I've been part of a few processes but they never seem to go anywhere.
- Yes, success depends on having a shared vision and getting people talking

Participants were asked how they will know if this process was successful. Most comments indicated a need for a clear vision and a solid plan.

- One, we have a clear vision that we can refer to on a regular basis, and two, we have continuity regardless of who is in the seats of council and mayor
- This will be successful if we get 2 or 3 clear objectives with measurables.
- There will be buy in from all the council members. We will have a plan to present to the community. Each alderperson will have at least one thing checked off their 'want' list so they feel invested in the project.
- Need to see ideas come to fruition. Short term wins. Spending time together really matters here! This will be great.
- Coming out with a solid plan is the number one priority.
- With administration turnover, can't go hard right and then hard left. Leadership team really matters, so how are we organized for longevity.

- If it opens up lines of communication and relationships across departments, would be a success.
- If we set reasonable goals and get to them, moving the city forward.
- It would be nice to have some kind of plan that we can make known to the community to garner support.
- Things continue on even if leadership turns over. Many hands in the process. The biggest thing is keeping council involved. Prioritize funding. How can we be sure the product can be handed to new people coming in. Really dissecting the feedback from the community and USING them!
- Know the city is reaching out and wants to know is nice. Confused why there's a public survey, hope all staff get to participate. If it's for all staff they need a voice.
- The immediate effect will get people talking together. Relationships will be better between and among staff and city council members. Everyone will understand the role they play.
- Buy-in. Everyone needs to feel like they contributed, understands, things that won't be on the top of one person's list but we all understand why it's all there and we've all provided value. It's a collaborative plan.
- Sounds easy, but...we have a plan! Agreed upon subset of goals, achievable, have steps to get there. Have something we can present to the city, this is what we've heard from everyone, what can we all agree on.

Are there any resources that you or the city needs to make this process successful?

- Grant writer
- We could use more education about how plans are made. We need a full-time grant writer
- Money is always the king, depends on goals. Find grants, get a grant writer, poverty is prevalent and lots of renters, hard to clean it up, landlords need to be onboard, incentives for the community to buy in.
- Some of the outside stakeholders
- One big hold-up is golf course. Holds us back in growth, and in other areas.
- A little overview of why we're doing this.
- Explain the process, get the buy-in and folks involved in the 2 sessions, would expect there are things that will pop up, will need some additional materials or support.
- Interested in summary of public survey, the one to staff - will be very beneficial.
- What would help: education on what the concept is to staff and councilors.

Participants were asked, if you could share one key insight about the city with the strategy team in preparation for this process, what would it be?

Answers included insight regarding the community and specific concerns about water capacity, elections, and budgets.

- There are many competing interests, sometimes it's a popularity contest, we struggle to communicate with each other and the community, people can be quick to judge.
- Most people want to see the city succeed and grow, but there are always a faction of people who are resistant to change and disagree with everything.
- The next water capacity issues.
- To be vulnerable and take a step of faith and engage in the process. Trust the process.
- There is an election coming up in April, so the city council might change with new people coming on and experienced people leaving.
- Employee longevity at the department head levels.
- Communicate, honest conversations.
- Need to know that the city budget is not equal.

- There is still some of the past disgruntlement in the community regarding the city government due to dysfunction on the council and city administrator positions in the past few years.
- Invest in staff members
- If done incorrectly or people feel pressed, they will become passive aggressive. Make sure everyone is involved and be aware of strong-willed people.
- Variables in personalities
- Budget concerns

Participants were asked if there was anything else they'd like to share while we have this time together today?

- That we all look at ourselves in the mirror and what role are we going to play to move forward! Making sure paper mill and Printpack stays put. Sustainable jobs and careers. Northstar steel etc. living wages to stay put.
- Excited for it. We don't have a lot of these opportunities to get on the same page.
- Lots of space to grow this in our community!
- Made the right decision and stayed when I had chance to leave...people just need to hang in there. Need to get our priorities straight. Really good to have all employees provide input.
- This is a great time for the strategic planning
- Great place to live, love the variety in work
